The Tellin' Stories Race, Equity, and Family Engagement Summer Institutes will teach participants to apply an asset-based lens to family engagement that is grounded in popular education, community organizing, racial equity, and family engagement research.

Summer institute topics will include:

- Learn, share, and develop strategies, tools, and approaches to effectively engage families at their schools.
- Racism, Classism, and Equity Literacy: Building Context for Families' Experiences with School
- Building Relationships and Meeting Families Where They Are
- Connecting Family Engagement to Academic Success
- Community Organizing Lessons for Educators
- Learning and Applying the Research on High Impact Family Engagement

MORE ABOUT THE INSTITUTES

The summer institutes are based on the yearlong Tellin' Stories Race, Equity, and Family Engagement Seminar and draw from research and in-school experience.

Teaching for Change has been recognized by the Harvard Family Research Project's National Family, School, and Community Engagement Working Group as one of the most effective approaches in the country for engaging traditionally marginalized parents (2010), and in the past several years has been written about in Education Week, Rethinking Schools, ThinkProgress, Education Leadership, and The Atlantic.

REGISTRATION INFORMATION

Target audience: Educators from public and public charter schools in the D.C. area and nationwide are welcome and encouraged to participate.

The June 25-27 teacher and staff summer institute is designed for teachers, counselors, support staff, school administrators (including assistant principals), and school-based parent coordinators and liaisons from Title I elementary schools.

The July 23-25 principal institute is specifically reserved for school principals. Eligible principals from DC schools are encouraged to apply for a scholarship.

Cost: $400 per participant. Participants will receive a copy of Teaching for Change's publication Between Families and Schools: Creating Meaningful Relationships.

Scholarships: A limited amount of scholarships are available to educators from:

- a. DCPS schools located in Wards 7 and 8
- b. DC public and public charter schools that received a "Comprehensive Support and Improvement Schools, type 1 (CS1)" designation from OSSE (i.e. bottom 5% on the ESSA STAR rating)

Participants who may be eligible for a scholarship are strongly encouraged to apply early.

Professional learning credits and units: All participants will receive a certificate upon successful completion, and may arrange to receive credit towards their professional learning, per LEA requirements. DC Public Schools educators may receive up to 24 PLUs for successfully completing the summer institute.

Location: Thurgood Marshall Center for Service and Heritage at 1816 12th Street NW, Washington, DC. A limited amount of affordable housing options may be arranged for out of town registrants. Breakfast and light refreshments will be provided, as well as an hour long break for lunch.
